

Networking and Working Remotely How to Survive and Thrive from Home

An online panel discussion presented by VWL's Networking Committee

Now, more than ever before, our experiences working from home and adapting to remote networking are colliding in new and unexpected ways.

Join us for a collaborative panel discussion that explores the challenges and opportunities which come from remote networking, and how you can not only survive from your home office, but truly thrive during this time.

Each of our panellists share their own unique experiences, strategies and lessons on how they have balanced working from home and remote networking while maintaining other aspects of their busy lives.

ELIZABETH RUDDLE

Elizabeth Ruddle has been a barrister for 15 years and practises in commercial, criminal, regulatory law and proceeds of crime. Liz is passionate about the work that she does, the important role the Courts play in people's lives and the wellbeing of her colleagues. As a mum of one and a second generation barrister she's acutely aware of the challenges of finding "balance" for lawyers, particularly in these challenging times.

FFYONA LIVINGSTONE CLARK

Ffyon is rapidly approaching three years at the Bar, and practises in all areas of criminal, and quasi-criminal law. Aside from her usual appearance work, Ffyon sits on the Criminal Bar Association Committee, the Victorian Bar's LGBTI Working Group, and co-authors 2 chapters of Bourke's Criminal Law in Victoria. Ffyon's wife is a family law solicitor, and they "balance" their new working-from-home lives by attempting to train their unruly springer spaniels, Netflix bingeing, and having cross-examinations over whose turn it is to cook dinner.

FELICITY FOX

Felicity is a barrister who practises predominantly in criminal and quasi-criminal matters. She also accepts briefs in employment law and general commercial matters. Prior to coming to the bar, Felicity was a solicitor at Herbert Smith Freehills and the Office of Public Prosecutions, and was also Senior Associate to the Honourable Robert Redlich QC in the Court of Appeal. In 2017/18 she lived in the UK while completing her BCL at the University of Oxford.

LINDA HART

Linda Hart is a Senior Associate at Aitken Partners practising exclusively in Wills & Estates. Linda has practised for over 16 years in Wills & Estates and commercial litigation at both top-tier and boutique practices. She is currently the Co-Chair of the Networking Committee for Victorian Women Lawyers and is passionate about supporting women in the law and finding new ways to improve their experience in the profession. Linda is also a regular marathon runner and enjoys meeting new people and building relationships.

ANDREW TURNER

As Deputy Chief Clerk at Foley's List, Andrew Turner has over 15 years' experience in the industry. Andrew is heavily involved in List management, business development and practice management. Andrew is well known and respected for his ability to bring together people from different fields and is committed to knowledge sharing across these industries through extensive networking opportunities.
