

WOMEN IN LAW DOING LAW DIFFERENTLY

Join us for this exciting panel discussion with women leaders in law who have founded and designed their own NewLaw practices. Our speakers are legal innovators and disrupters who have dared to do law outside the traditional model, transforming the delivery of legal services and the legal profession and by doing so they have paved the way for many lawyers to do law differently.

This event is suited to Principal-level lawyers and Senior Lawyers looking for inspiration and insight into doing law differently, and will be moderated by Sounita Viravout, Principal Lawyer and Founder of Onside Family Lawyers, who also sits on VWL's Executive Committee.

Dr. Maree Livermore is the Founder and CEO at Tribe Family Lawyers, an online family law practice featuring a range of affordable, fixed-price, unbundled legal services designed for clients in the Justice Gap. Maree is also the author of the plain-English guide, The Family Law Handbook, currently working on the 6th edition. She is a long-time advocate for the needs of self-represented litigants and for victims of domestic violence in the family law system. She is interested in the democratisation of access to everyday legal services through user-centred legal design and digital engagement.

Fionn Bowd is a projects lawyer turned business-owner and she knows what it's like to work hard. She has moved cities for the job of her dreams and she has taken jobs solely for their flexibility. She has two young children and two teenage step-children, and she believes in making work better for all the lawyers who are just like her. At Bowd, she helps lawyers who want to work on their own terms find work with large and small law firms and the occasional corporation, and she is still on the tools herself.

Laura Vickers founded Northcote-based law firm Nest Legal in 2013 and the firm now employs 23 fabulous humans across Victoria, NSW and NZ. Nest Legal's goal is to make it easy for busy people to protect their nest. The LexisNexis Legal Innovation Index judges described Laura as an 'industry game-changer' through her team's 'innovative approach to client service that perfectly services its target market'. She is the editor of the Conveyancing chapter of the Law Handbook, the founder of NewLaw Chambers (1400+ innovative Australian lawyers trying to do law differently) and a tired Northcote mum of two.

Marianne Marchesi is the founder and managing principal of Legalite - a NewLaw firm that aims to simplify legal services. Since establishing the firm in 2017, she has led Legalite in becoming a market-leading firm in the business and franchising space. She is a multi-award-winning lawyer, including recently being named one of Australia's Most Influential Lawyers in the Changemaker category by Australasian Lawyer. Marianne is a trailblazing and leading authority in her field. She's a strong negotiator and strategic operator, combined with being warm and having genuine care for her clients. Marianne has the unique approach of not only being an astute problem solver, but also visionary in terms of the future of the legal industry.
